

Robb Report

Sneak Peak: Singular Patagonia, Chile

DECEMBER 12, 2012

ADD TO MY FAVORITES

After 70 years in operation as a sheep-processing factory and then a decade of restoration, the Bories cold-storage plant reopened December 1 as the Singular Patagonia, a 57-room, luxury hotel. Located near southern Chile's Torres del Paine National Park, the sleek and eco-conscious hotel offers floor-to-ceiling windows with majestic views of the nearby snow-capped mountains and the surrounding fjord. The nearly 100-acre secluded property offers 20 different expeditions; a 3,000-square-foot holistic spa with an indoor/outdoor heated swimming pool, sauna, and steam room; and an on-site museum, which pays tribute to the history of the region and the significance of the circa-1915 factory that was declared a national monument in 1996. The hotel's restaurant also offers selections of the region's local wines, and the menu focuses on traditional regional recipes prepared with locally sourced ingredients. Rooms begin at $660 per night. (+562.954.0480, thesingular.com)

— Amanda Millin